My advice to my freshmen self would be to live each day to the fullest. Even if things aren't going great, I will only regret the days that I wasted. Also, I would say to be friendly to everyone and not stress TOO much. -- Samantha Rodia

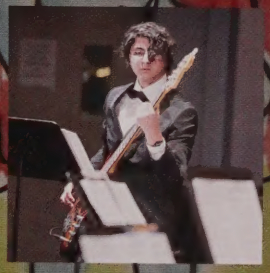
STUDENT LIFE

My favorite high school memory was traveling to Rome with the Latin Club. I originally went with two friends, but left with nine. It was so fun to travel through Italy with a group of people I would have otherwise never known. --- Emily Ball

My favorite high school memory was... Riding a razor scooter around the school at 3am during a STUCO lock-in. -- Christine Murray



My favorite memory was... All the late nights (11-1am) spent in the Plimpton building, for the robotics team the night before competitions. -- Armand Caloumenos

Speech Team

The Speech and Debate Team started off the year by breaking a team record as they placed 3rd out of 25 schools at the first tournament of the school year! The team continued to have success as many students qualified for states. A highlight from this year was the trip to Fort Lauderdale, Florida, where students competed at the Sunvitational Tournament at Nova University. Another highlight from this year is that junior Reshma Abraham qualified for NSDA Nationals in Lincoln-Douglas Debate and represented the state of Massachusetts in Fort Lauderdale, Florida this past June. Only three students in each event could qualify. She is the first student from Walpole to qualify for this national tournament.

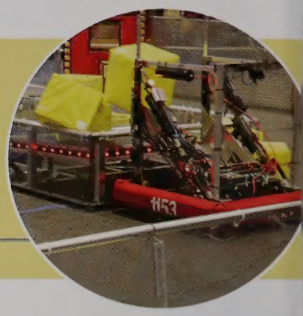
Robotics



The Walpole High School Robotics Team participated in the 2018 FIRST Robotics Power-Up Challenge. This year's theme was FIRST POWER-UP. The robots picked up power cubes and scored by placing them in a switch, a scale or a vault. At the end of the match, the robots could climb to get extra points. In March the team participated at WPI and Bryant.

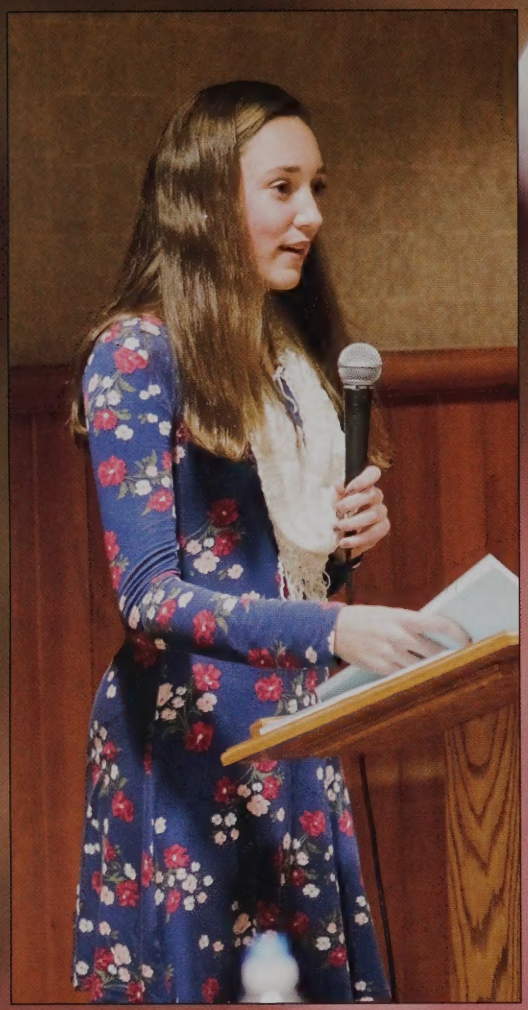
Poetry Reading



Yet you listen to these echoes.
Most strange of all you've experienced.
And with others' words,
You begin to piece the world together
In a way that makes sense,
Because there are words.
– Lindsay Navick

You made my heart melt like a summer snow cone,
Until you started throwing stones,
Black and blues blended into "I love you,
– Carlie Cavanaugh

Incessant thoughts
torment the peace
Burning through the quiet fields Destroying the autumn harvest
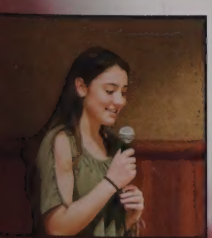
– Sanjana Bhagavatula

Perhaps power isn't a place or a feeling.
Simply a state of mind. – Madison Simard

Late night drives home,
We have always taken the long way back.
Going all around Walpole, weaving back and forth between deserted roads
Just talking and laughing,
In that old, dirty car of yours.
– Nicole St. Germain

Ashes bite her feet as her strength,
her resolve,
and her bravery,
crumbles under the all powerful flame
– Jodi Mathew

We let not failing become genius...
We let life lose meaning
-- Maraget Wall



because i will knit a new sweater with my own love that is,
thicker,
warmer.
– Molly Holbrook

she spoke her tranquil words,
As flames roared reaching in her soul
The ashes scatted from the wind,
Collecting in her consciousness.

NOBLE G. NAMENSON

The Dictionary defines "noble" as "[h]aving fine personal qualities or high moral principles and ideals". It appears that we chose the perfect name for you. You were born with a sense of humanity and humor. You are always a joy to be around. You never complain, demand, or disparage others. Your words are never wasted, they are always worthwhile and meant to share something interesting or to seek knowledge. There is not a selfish or self-centered bone in your body. You possess a wit and sense of humor that has always entertained and impressed us, as does your ability to create music and short films. You have surpassed our expectations. We know you will make this world a better place, whether it be through your music, films, or by just continuing to give to the world more than you take. We love you and are so proud of what you have accomplished and who you have become. Mom & Dad

Graduation Speeches

Four years of high school make up less than a third of our early education, 5% of an average person's lifetime, and the tiniest fraction of a millisecond on this planet's timeclock, relative to its enormous history. Now you may be thinking, that's a really awful way to start a commencement speech; we are supposed to be appreciating the past and pushing towards the future, and here I am trivializing it. But my point is about time; at certain points, we thought that high school was never going to end, but now that it's over, there just simply wasn't enough time for all the things you wanted to do, people you wanted to meet and spend time with. One day you're sitting in class with the friends you've had your entire childhood, and the next you're just done, now expected to be a partially functioning member of society. But as we move forward in our lives now, however intimidating it might be, I think there are only a few things to remember to stay true to yourself: to continue to grow and to actively fight for your happiness.

I have found that learning is the process by which we find our identities; it shapes our values and thus our decisions. A never-ending education shapes us, makes us who we are; constantly evolving and advancing conscious beings. We, the Walpole High School Class of 2018, are not only beings of the present but also the future; let's make sure we are educated enough to be fit to run it.

Secondly, take your happiness seriously, because nothing is more important. For the rest of our lives, for the next fraction of a millisecond that we have the privilege of being alive on this earth, pursue nothing else with greater fervor. Find joy and meaning not only in yourself, but in those who surround you and the experiences shared among you all.

Like I said, you only have a millisecond: make sure it is worth it. Time is precious; cherish it.

So even though I said we've only had a millisecond together, for us it has four years of joy, laughter, stress, maybe a few tears, friendship, and shared experiences. Four years of childhood and growing. Four years that can never be relived, but four years that we also can never forget.

Thank you, Class of 2018, for making our millisecond together so special.

-- Jessica Fitzgerald, Valedictorian

I realised something: the Walpole High School hallways are a mess. It all started the first week of freshman year. I was excited to be in a new school with new people; I had a new backpack; life was looking pretty good. I'm walking through the hallways, very lost, head in my schedule, and I entered what I would later describe as WHS' very own whirlpool. Located at the intersection of the math wing, English wing, and science wing, the whirlpool is to be avoided at all costs. Freshman me innocently approaches the intersection, and is immediately squashed and tossed in every direction other than the one I was trying to go in. I'm panicking because my backpack is being pushed one way and my body is being pushed another way; things are getting fuzzy; I'm starting to blackout a little, and something crashes into me. It's another freshman. In the moment that we locked eyes, before the writhing mass of people could swallow us whole, a shared SOS message passed between us. I looked at her. She nodded. I grabbed onto her backpack and we bulldozed through that crowd, taking down anyone that got in our way, including a teacher or two. Was it aggressive? Yes, but it's a dog-eat-dog world in those halls; you've got to fend for yourself sometimes.

I've learned a lot since that harsh introduction to high school. First of all, use the buddy system; don't enter the whirlpool without a friend whose backpack you can hold onto in times of crisis. Don't stand in the hallway chatting during a passing time. Don't walk through the basement during wrestling season unless you want to lose your sense of smell, and most of all, always always always stick to the right side of the road. When that bell rings and you're thrust into the chaos of the hallway, you need have a set game plan, multiple backup plans, and you have to be aggressive. I've done a lot of growing up in those hallways.

We entered this school unaware and afraid, and now we say goodbye, having memorized every water-damaged ceiling tile and graffitied bathroom stall. We are no longer scared to walk through the hallways. The real world people have been telling us about? It doesn't have hallways; it has campuses and roads, but that doesn't mean we aren't prepared. We're masters at maneuvering ourselves through difficult situations. It is intimidating, finding our way without the walls of WHS to guide us, but now we have the freedom to go wherever we want and to make our own path. Getting lost is a small worry when Walpole has provided us with the most important thing we need to find our way: each other. The friends we've made here are ones that we will all hold onto forever. As we go our separate ways, know that you are loved and supported, so if you're going through life and something goes wrong, reach out. I'm sure someone, whether it be a parent, teacher, or friend, will gladly lend you a hand, or maybe a backpack to hold onto, and will help pull you through the whirlpool.
